Carolyn Lamm

named WBA Woman Lawyer of the Year

■ Carolyn Lamm

"Carolyn is a person with unflagging energy who takes on every task with gusto, commitment, and perseverance. I can tell you firsthand that she is an outstanding lawyer."

— Hon. Paul Friedman, United States District Court for the District of Columbia

Adding to an already illustrious career, Carolyn Lamm has been named by the Women's Bar Association of the District of Columbia as its 38th Woman Lawyer of the Year, joining the ranks of an esteemed group of past honorees. Lamm has been a partner at White & Case LLP since 1984. She founded and was the first to head White & Case's International Trade Practice Group.

Lamm joined White & Case as an associate in 1980 - becoming a member of the WBA that same year — after gaining experience in the Justice Department under the Attorney General's Honor Program. While at Justice, she served as a trial attorney in the Fraud Section of the Civil Division before becoming Assistant Director of its Commercial Litigation Branch.

RAISING

PRESIDENT'S COLUMN

BY DEBORAH J. ISRAEL

Did you know that there are 33 co-chairs leading the Committees and Fora of the WBA; 12 members of the WBA Board of Directors; and 12 members of the WBA Foundation Board? Each of these groups holds a monthly meeting, usually 3 to 4 hours in length, to discuss and plan the work of the WBA. The dedication of these volunteers is the only way an organization like the WBA, with only 2 staff members, could have managed the sheer quantity and top-notch quality of the programs we have put forth this year.

With the challenges of September 11th facing us, we wasted no time, and courageously pursued a very, very active program year. I would like to commend the WBA co-chairs and board for organizing what I believe to be some of the best substantive programs and memorable networking events in the Washington Metropolitan area this year.

Some of those programs included:

- The Fall Kick-Off, featuring soccer star Mia Hamm of the Washington Freedom, and Wilma Lewis, former U.S. Attorney for the District of Columbia;
- The First WBA Golf Classic;
- The Corporate Counsel Reception featuring Michaela English of the Discovery Channel/Discovery Communications, Inc; and
- The Judicial Reception, organized in conjunction with the National Association of Women Judges, and held at the Women in Military Service for America Memorial.

These are just a few of the many WBA programs that brought together private practitioners, government attorneys, members of the judiciary, and corporate and community leaders. Both women and men attended our programs, and the feedback has been tremendously positive.

I would like to personally thank each member of my board for allowing me to serve them and particularly for their courage, insight, and exceptional hard work this year. I would like to especially thank Ellen Jakovic, President-Elect, who has worked so incredibly hard this year. I owe a debt of gratitude to my Treasurer, Heidi Sorensen, and to Marjorie Burnett, Treasurer-Elect for putting our finances in order; Kim Knight-our phenomenal Executive Director; Annual Dinner Co-Chairs, Nancy A. Long and Sharon Goley; the Raising the Bar Editorial Board; my friend and WBA Foundation President, Caroline Petro and her Board — and perhaps most importantly — my superb Co-Chairs.

If you have liked anything that you have seen this year, it is due to the vision and hard work of these servants of the Women's Bar Association. On behalf of the entire Women's Bar Association thanks to each of you for your incredible service and hard work throughout this entire year. ■

WBA/WBAF Annual Dinner

May 16, 2002 at the National Building Museum

Celebrating WBA's 85th Anniversary

UNDER SECRETARY OF STATE FOR GLOBAL AFFAIRS TO KEYNOTE ANNUAL DINNER

■ Hon. Paula J. Dobriansky

"Ensuring women's rights benefits individuals and their families, strengthens democracy, fosters prosperity, enhances human rights and advances religious tolerance. It is at the core of building a civil, law-abiding society, which is an indispensable prerequisite for true democracy. The advancement of issues of concern to women has been a long-standing American goal. This administration has intensified that pursuit."

— Hon. Paula J. Dobriansky, Under Secretary of State for Global Affairs

The Honorable Dr. Paula J. Dobriansky, Under Secretary of State for Global Affairs, will keynote the WBA/WBAF Annual Dinner on May 16th. In keeping with the dinner's theme of "Women Leading the Nation into a New World," Dr. Dobriansky will share insights from her position, where she is responsible for foreign policy matters that include democracy, human rights, labor, law enforcement, refugee and humanitarian relief matters.

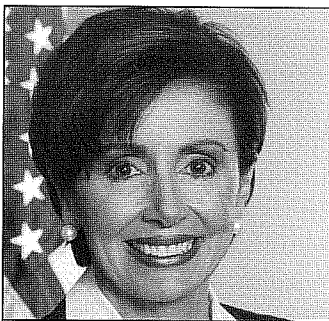

Nominated by President Bush on March 12, 2001, she was unanimously confirmed by the Senate on April 16 and sworn in on May 1, 2001.

Prior to her appointment Dr. Dobriansky served as Senior Vice President and Director of the Washington Office of the Council on Foreign Relations. Prior to that Dr. Dobriansky served as Senior International Affairs and Trade Advisor at Hunton & Williams, and as co-chair of the International TV Council at the Corporation for Public Broadcasting.

Dr. Dobriansky is a distinguished lecturer and author, with numerous articles, book chapters, and op-ed pieces to her credit.

SPECIAL HONORED GUEST HON. NANCY PELOSI (D-Ca.) HOUSE MINORITY WHIP

■ Hon. Nancy Pelosi

Joining us as Special Honored Guest for the evening will be the Honorable Nancy Pelosi (D-Ca.), House Minority Whip for the United States House of Representatives. When Congresswoman Pelosi was elected by her colleagues to be the House Democratic Whip, she became the highest-ranking woman in the history of the United States Congress.

In addition to her leadership role, Pelosi is the Ranking Democrat on the House Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence, which exercises oversight of all U.S. government intelligence activities. Her focus on the committee is to ensure that the executive branch has the tools it needs to protect the United States - our armed forces, our national interests, and our civil liberties.

Rep. Pelosi is also a member of the powerful House Appropriations Committee, where she has had a significant impact funding the nation's priorities

- both domestic and foreign. Her policy focus is on health care, quality education, affordable housing, intelligence, national security, environmental protection, and choice.

"Democrats have made history by electing a woman to a leadership position in Congress for the first time, but now we must make progress."

— Hon. Nancy Pelosi

MAKE PLANS NOW TO ATTEND THE ANNUAL DINNER!

Once again...the graceful halls of the National Building Museum will play host to this important gathering of WBA and WBAF friends.

WBA President Deborah Israel and Foundation President Caroline Petro are working diligently, along with their respective board members, to drum up attendance and support for the event. Table sponsorships range from the Leadership level at $10,000, to the $2,000 Patron level. As in past years, individual members are encouraged to support the occasion by signing up as a Friend of the WBA/WBAF Annual Dinner. The Friend level ($200), includes a ticket to the dinner and a listing in the commemorative program. All ticket purchases include a tax-deductible donation to the Women's Bar Association Foundation.

The evening begins with a reception at 6:30 p.m. followed by dinner at 7:30 p.m. The National Building Museum is located at 401 F Street, NW, and is conveniently located across from the Judiciary Square metro station. The regular individual ticket rate is $95 for members and $125 for non-members. To reserve a table or a seat, please contact the WBA office at (202) 639-8880. ■

RAISING THE BAR

U.S. Attorney Issues A Call to Service

BY GRACEMARIE MADDALENA
AND PAULETTE CHAPMAN

Imagine that you are a white man driving into Harlem, New York. You pull into a parking spot where two police cars pull up behind you. Four black officers approach and arrest you for a crime you allegedly committed. You are immediately taken to the precinct where all the police are black. Then you are taken to court where the judge, the previously empanelled jury, the prosecutor and all the people in the courtroom are all black. You are appointed counsel, again a black man. Do you think you will receive a fair trial?

■ Hon. Roscoe C. Howard, Jr. (far right)

This is the scenario United States Attorney for the District of Columbia, Roscoe C. Howard, Jr. asked participants to imagine during his March 20, 2002, luncheon discussion sponsored by the Women's Bar Association and the ABA White Collar Crime Committee's Young Lawyers Section. No one in the large room of legal professionals thought a fair trial would result. With only one exception, neither did any of Howard's law students at the University of Kansas where he taught criminal law for seven years prior to returning to the District in August 2002 to assume his present post.

Unfortunately, the scenario is one that many people face each day when they are pulled into our justice system. Individuals are surrounded by legal professionals who are dissimilar to them whether by gender, race, ethnicity or culture. In what Howard described as most the important experience of an individual's life, when someone is in court with his/her home, finances, personal relationships or even liberty at stake, he or she is in a sea of dissimilarity. No one in the system is like them. They are, in a sense, alone during this critical, frightening time.

U.S. Attorney Howard's charge to his audience was to change this. He believes that if legal professionals would accept his challenge and get involved, people would have better experiences when involved in the justice system. As more women and minorities become a part of the justice system, citizens will see themselves represented in the jury, judge, prosecutor and/or defense attorney.

Relaying his own personal experience traveling up Interstate 95 from Virginia to Rhode Island via Connecticut for football camp at Brown University during his college days, Howard told of the multiple times he was stopped by the police. As a young African-American man traveling at night, he was a target for police. Each year during this trek to football camp he was pulled over, each time for a different reason. Each time the officer requested to search his car. Each time he consented. He consented because he did not know he could say no and because he did not want to spend a night in jail. He consented to make life easier. He later learned that the other black players on the team had similar experiences, but the white players never had been pulled over.

This kind of experience results in people being defensive toward or even fearing others dissimilar to them. Involvement of legal professionals in the community and community education will hopefully help abate scenarios like U.S. Attorney Howard's from continuing to occur generations into the future.

Upon returning to DC, Howard drove over to the neighborhood in Southeast where he stayed with his now-deceased aunt during the summers of his childhood. He stopped to visit an elderly friend who still lived in the neighborhood. The elderly gentleman was literally locked in his home, fearful of the neighborhood that once flourished.

Parts of the District are not safe, feared by residents of those communities. One of his administration's priorities is heightened community involvement. Howard and many of his colleagues at the United States Attorney's Office are residents of the District. They are involved in the communities and know what is going on. Beyond that, he and his colleagues attend community meetings and hear what people are saying. Some prosecutors are now assigned to specific Washington, DC neighborhoods. They are dealing with all the crimes in an area so they know what the issues of the residents are and see the patterns and the needs of the neighbors.

The theme of this powerful and articulate presentation was the need for professionals to remember that they are counselors, looked to for guidance and advice. In this role we need to be involved and remember that we serve not only as representatives of the court and the justice system generally, but as representatives of the gender, race, ethnicity, and culture that is an inherent part of each of us and a role more important than any job title we may possess. ■

Ambassador Bianchi Addresses International Forum

BY NATALIA GEREN

The United States and the Republic of Chile are in the process of negotiating a bilateral free trade agreement, which would liberalize commerce between the two countries and expand business and investment opportunities for private industry. On March 13th, the WBA International Forum and Women in International Trade co-sponsored a breakfast panel discussion at the Embassy of Chile, focusing on the history, current status, and business implications of the proposed agreement. The current Ambassador of Chile to the United States, Andres Bianchi, spoke about the advantageous economic conditions in Chile and the anticipated benefits of the free trade agreement. John O'Leary, former U.S. Ambassador to Chile, described the history of the negotiations and the prospects for their successful conclusion. John Murphy, of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, provided insight into U.S. industry's support of the agreement. The discussion was moderated by Susan Watson of Dyer, Ellis & Joseph, and was attended by approximately 60 people.

What is the WBA Foundation?

BY CAROLINE E. PETRO,
WBAF PRESIDENT

■ Caroline E. Petro

If you have asked yourself this question, then you may not know how important the Foundation is for you as a WBA member.

- Is the Foundation different from the WBA? The Foundation is the fundraising partner of the WBA. Governed by its own Board of Directors and independent of the WBA, the Foundation is a charitable organization with tax-exempt status under section 501(c)(3) of the tax code. But the Foundation is a "sponsored" foundation, which assures that it will always have a special connection to the WBA.
- What does the Foundation do? The Foundation's main function is to provide grants to other organizations or programs that serve the Foundation's mission. While the Foundation's stated mission has broad charitable and educational purposes, historically its focus has been to support programs that empower women lawyers and pursue justice for women. In this respect, the Foundation's objectives are very much aligned with those of the WBA. Like all organizations subject to section 501(c)(3) of the tax code, the Foundation is precluded from supporting candidates for political office.
- Does the Foundation affect me, as a WBA member? Many of the Foundation's grants are awarded to programs and events sponsored by the WBA or one of its committees. Did you know that your WBA newsletter, Raising the Bar, is fully funded by grants from the Foundation, as part of its educational mission?
- Who funds the Foundation's grants? The Foundation relies on WBA member donations to fund grants. In the last several years, the Foundation has initiated a fundraising campaign to build an endowment. The Foundation hopes that in the future it will fund grants exclusively from the interest income generated by the endowment, ensuring a reliable source for grants for many years to come.
- How can I contribute to the Foundation? There are many things you can do to contribute to the Foundation: make a tax-deductible donation to the Endowment Fund Campaign; ask your law firm or employer to make a tax-deductible donation to the Endowment Fund Campaign; participate in a Foundation fundraising activity; or buy a table at the Annual Awards Dinner on May 16, 2002 and deduct the price of the table in excess of $80 per person.

You can donate to the Foundation through the WBA website, by mailing a check to the WBA office, on your membership renewal form, or at the Annual Awards Dinner.
